MONTENAPO RESTAURANT FACT SHEET

Cuisine:

Montenapo Restaurant offers authentic modern and traditional Italian cuisine from all regions of Italy. Chef Lucarelli and Gallina are passionate about creating exquisitely flavorful meals that are healthy and natural. They do this by choosing only the highest quality products including organic vegetables, organic rice, and whole grains, as well as grass fed beef, free range poultry and wild caught fish. All pastas, breads and breadsticks homemade from scratch on premises. The artistically designed gourmet desserts including pastries, sorbets and ice creams will all be freshly prepared at Montenapo using only the most natural ingredients.

Description:

Housed within the Renzo Piano-designed New York Times Building, the restaurant occupies 5,200 square feet of glass-enclosed dining space facing the unique and beautiful inner birch-and-moss garden in the center atrium of the building. Named after the famous designer-shopping street Via Montenapoleone in Milan, the contemporary yet comfortable design exemplifies the easy chic of Italian style and harmonizes with the luminous aesthetic of the much heralded newspaper building, as will its modern take on classic Italian fare. Serving lunch and dinner, Chefs Lucarelli and Gallina showcase their bold interpretation and imaginative approach to incorporating incredible flavors, delicacies and varieties of foods into their menu.
